

Abstract

Adhesive layers for peelably attaching a region of an upper base material that forms a delivery slip to a lower base material are intermittently provided in each of a plurality of linear adhesive rows that extend in parallel, 5 from a peeling start end of the region of the upper base material that forms the delivery slip, from the lower base material toward a peeling finish end, and the adhesive layer is not present in at least one adhesive row on any line perpendicular to the adhesive rows.