Abstract

A positioning method is performed by a positioning measurement device, and includes: reporting a positioning measurement report, in which the positioning measurement report includes at least one of a carrier phase measurement result and direct path indication information.

FIG.2