ABSTRACT

The invention relates to a process for inactivating proteases by repeatedly changing the pH in the cell culture supernatant at the start of the process for the purification of biopharmaceuticals. The pH is adjusted first to 3-5, and then to 7-9.