ABSTRACT

The present invention discloses a method for optimizing multifocal lens designs using neural network analysis. More specifically, a neural network is trained using data collected in clinical evaluations of various multifocal lens designs. The trained neural network is then used to predict optimal lens designs for large populations of patients.

This Sheet Has Been Replaced