ABSTRACT

Telecommunication System and Method

A method for activating services at a telephone, the method comprising upon the telephone making a telephone call to the number of the telephone, activating a services server. The services server communicates with the telephone over a telecommunications network to which the telephone is connected. Upon at least one service being selected at the telephone, the selection is communicated to the services server. The services server activates the at least one service.

Fig. 1