

ABSTRACT

NETWORK CONNECTION CONTROL

A telephone network has an interconnected plurality of subscriber telephones and a server, the server having voice recognition capability providing the ability to recognise the voice of a subscriber and to respond to voice commands from the subscriber so as to direct connections in and to the network.

Figure 1