

ABSTRACT

A skin management device recognizes whether a user's skin has been sucked, and when the user's skin has been sucked, applies a high frequency to the sucked skin, thereby reducing power consumption and improving a skin massage effect.