

COMMUNICATIONS SYSTEM

ABSTRACT

A communications system, comprising a plurality of functional elements, means for measuring properties of the functional
5 elements, a processing function element for controlling the measuring means and receiving data from the measuring means, communications links linking the central processor with the measuring means, and the processing element being arranged to selectively instruct the measuring means to transmit selected
10 data to the processing element.

Fig. 2