

METHOD FOR PRODUCING ANTIBODIES

ABSTRACT

A method for generating a cell that produces a multispecific binding molecule, the method including a step of introducing a first vector and a second vector into a cell, wherein the first vector contains genes for all polypeptide chains constituting the multispecific binding molecule, the second vector contains a gene for a polypeptide chain with low expression, and the multispecific binding molecule may be a multispecific antibody.

[No suitable figure]