

ABSTRACT

A meat substitute having a physical property similar to that of meat derived from an animal and having good workability is provided. Further, a meat substitute, when cooked, having a texture, a flavor, an appearance and the like similar to a case in which meat derived from an animal is cooked is provided. A meat substitute including curd containing curdlan and a cellulose derivative as constituents. A meat substitute including curd containing curdlan and a cellulose derivative as constituents, in which the cellulose derivative is at least one of methyl cellulose or hydroxypropylmethyl cellulose. A meat substitute including curd containing curdlan and a cellulose derivative as constituents, further including vegetable protein. A meat substitute including curd containing curdlan and a cellulose derivative as constituents, further including powder containing starch as a constituent.

No Figure