

Abstract

The present invention relates to a system and method for an inline inspection system for detecting Mold defects in ophthalmic lenses located within a saline filled cuvette, and in particular defects that may appear both in the printed area and the transparent area of the lens.

Figure 1.