Abstract

Alloys based on copper, nickel, tin and lead obtained by a method of continuous or semi-continuous casting, or static billet casting or sprayforming billet casting, and capable of spinodal hardening. The machinability index of the inventive alloys exceeds 80% relatively to standard ASTM C36000 brass and can even reach 90%.