Abstract

The invention relates to a method for alignment and contact-making of a first substrate (15) with a second substrate (15') using several detection units as well as a corresponding device.

Figure 1b in this regard