

ABSTRACT

WIRELESS COMMUNICATION WITH NON-NETWORKED CONTROLLERS

A computer-implemented method and system for controlling remote access to a computer system is disclosed. A method includes generating a secret value at a first computer system; sharing the secret value with associated computer systems; choosing a time length for validity; computing a derived key based on the secret value; and controlling remote access to the computer system based on the derived key and a unique identifier associated with the first computer system.

[Figure 2]