

ABSTRACT

The present disclosure provides encryption methods and apparatuses, and electronic devices. In the present disclosure, private encryption information is recorded in the user private region in the encryption medium provided for the target software. By encrypting the associated data of the target software through the private encryption information, the target software and its associated data are encrypted using the same encryption medium, which reduces encryption complexity and improves encryption convenience.

[Fig. 2]