

ABSTRACT

Introduced are a method and device for virtually controlling logistics processes, the method comprising the steps of: collecting operation information about an operation target; generating a virtual map on which an object corresponding to the operation target is displayed; setting a trigger zone on the virtual map; determining a positional relationship between an area occupied by the object on the virtual map and the trigger zone; and outputting a signal corresponding to the result of the determination.

Fig. 4