

METHOD FOR IDENTIFYING MALICIOUS WEB RESOURCES

ABSTRACT

A method for identifying malicious web resources, executed on a computer device, the method comprises: receiving pointers for a plurality of web resources; extracting at least part of the content elements of each web resource; combining at least two content elements in at least one first subgroup in response to the quantity of web resources exceeds a predefined minimum threshold; combining at least two content elements in at least one second subgroup in response to the quantity of web resources exceeds a predefined minimum threshold; combining the first and second subgroup in a group of content elements in response to the quantity of web resources including the content elements of the first and second content element subgroups exceeds a predefined threshold; saving the group of content elements and pointers for web resources associated with the relevant group of content elements in a database.

Fig. 2