

Abstract

The present invention relates to a process of forming a fiber-cement composite sheet using two slurry compositions. The first slurry composition is used for forming a base layer and a second slurry composition is used for forming a surface layer to obtain a 5 fiber-cement composite sheet having smooth-surface. This results in significant reduction in the use of coating material but still has the base layer for the strength without any need for further production steps.