

NESTED AND ISOLATED TRANSISTORS WITH REDUCED IMPEDANCE DIFFERENCE

ABSTRACT

A processing layer, such as silicon, is formed on a metal silicide contact followed by a metal layer. The silicon and metal layers are annealed to increase the thickness of the metal silicide contact. By selectively increasing the thickness of silicide contacts, R_s of transistors in iso and nested regions can be matched.

Fig. 3