Abstract

A sidelink configuration method, performed by a first terminal, includes: determining a target value for a timer according to a transmission path of a first radio resource control (RRC) message, in which the first RRC message is a sidelink message sent by the first terminal to a second terminal, and the timer is used for indicating that a radio link failure occurs in the sidelink in a case of expiry; and configuring the timer according to the target value for the timer.

Fig. 3